Home » Activities » Intermediate B1 There are a number of forms in the past and present, so it is suitable for a class that revises these structures. In addition, exercise could be used to introduce different forms and times. In this case, students should do exercises without pointing out the forms themselves, then analyze them. This approach can help demystify an area that students often taste. Before class, prepare enough photocopies of the sheet for each student to have a copy. Ask the class the question below (If you have students who are already famous in the class for a particular characteristic, you can invoke it instead): Who do you think might be very sleepy today? Invite students to suggest people and explain their reasons. Give a sheet and invite students to complete the sheet and work in pairs. If you're working with a new class, make sure they know the names of others. As students finish completing sentences, invite students to get up and take a walk to check their ideas with the people they named. Give them time and support the discussion, but watch them closely. This will help you manage the next steps if you are using this exercise to introduce this area. To complete the exercise, ask the class how successful they were in guessing and elicit some interesting answers that they want to share. Language focus are modal verbs of duty and privilege. Hello, my name is Jonny and I'm a medical student. I want to be a doctor because I like helping people. Getting into medical school is kind of hard. You can study very hard at school and you need to know a lot about science, you don't need to know about math or English, but you have to work hard for a few years. Now that I'm in med school, I can talk to people, I can take patients, I can take blood, but I can't do any surgeries or be alone with patients. I'm pretty far away in my medical school time so I don't have a lot of free time, but I can still go to the gym, I can still play football with my friends and still play other sports and music like my free time. But I don't have much free time anymore and I also can't miss lessons because it's very important to go to all of them. Overall, I'm having a good time. What is your job and do you like it? If you are a student, what job would you like to do, and why? 21. kello 17.16 · Many of us no longer have the opportunity to exchange ideas with colleagues in the sauspices. Home » English Grammar » Verbs fdrewaserera answered on 1 October, 2020 - 03:13 Hi How can I use gerund form and infinitive with go I found in the Cambridge dictionary that goes is used with ing when we talk about general activities that involve movement and if activities have a clear beginning and end, then go + to-infinitive is used I also found on another dictionary that goes gurend used with activities and we don't use go to inf with activities In another dictionary we use go to inf move ot travel instead of for a specific purpose and they suggest we use shopping or fishing or dancing with go but why don't we use shopping with go?and not say go to the store or go dancing ot go watch or go watch can explain how for me are the same , and I do not understand what these dictionaries mean. How do I know to distinguish between them and use them in the right way OlalELTS answered on 20 September, 2020 - 22:26 Nigeria This is really interesting. Thanks. Timmy Ferrer replied on 11 September, 2020 - 07:22 Philippines Hello! In this section I read that could not be a negative form must. In another source, he says there can also be no negative form of the same modal verb. Can I tell the difference? When can't I use them and can't use them? Thank you so much! Peter M. replied on 11 September, 2020 - 08:10 Poland Hello Timmy Ferrer, Modal verbs have multiple uses and there is no one-to-one correlation between them when it comes to modal being used to express the negative meaning of another verb. The opposite must not be the case in one context; in another it might not be; in another it might not be. If you want to check if the two modals have the opposite meaning, then we will be happy to help you, but you need to put modal in sentences to see which use is relevant. Peter LearnEnglish Team Timmy Ferrer replied on 14 September, 2020 - 01:23 Philippines Thank you very much for your reply. What about these examples? 1. You may not wear casual clothing at work. 2. You can not wear casual clothes at work. 3. You do not need to wear casual clothes at work. Thank you again! I have 3 questions: Question 1) To make a statement I am not an angel true, it is neither necessary nor sufficient that I should not be a member of the ensemble of angels. ---- is there meaning the word should? Question 2) If it rained last night, the match will be cancelled. ---- is different from a must? Question 3) According to the grammar book, to make confident predictions about the present based on our knowledge or experience, we use will/won't: It's five o'clock. Janet will now be in Paris (a spokesperson believes this to be true). ---- My question is Could I use the must instead? Is there a difference in meaning? English Help courses
